Their butts may be on the way out, but come July 1st the Centre Spot will have plenty more ass.

To combat the projected loss of approximately $18,000 in revenue they will suffer from the removal of cigarette sales on campus, the Students' Union has decided to bring in what they feel is a much more lucrative product – pornography.

"I got the idea the other night while I was watching Clitoon starring Dick Masters," said Union President Dave Prang. "I ran it by (incoming President) Andy Pushalik right away and had Mike Fox look at the numbers. We all knew immediately that porn is the most logical response to our present problem."

The proposal put forth by Prang and the Students' Union Board of Directors recommends the introduction of both adult films and dirty magazines as a means of raising additional revenues at the Centre Spot. According to Pushalik, there has also been talk of "toys," but no decision has yet been made on this issue.

"I think it would be great if we could also offer props, such as ass beads or penis pumps," commented Pushalik, the current Vice President of Student Services. "Because I use ass beads ALL the time – while I work, while I'm in class – wherever! I've also had a few outstanding experiences with walkie-talkie sex."

University President Dr. Bob Rosehart didn't have much to say on what has become known as 'Porn Proposal 69' (PP-69), but he did offer a few words of advice.

"As long as they stay out of my 'Barely Legal' private stash, I'm okay with it. Hell, this makes it easier for me. Do you know if they'll be offering any frequent buyer points? Cause I watch TONS of porn."

According to VP: Finance for Student Publications Eddy Schall, who has plenty of experience with porn, "the Union will likely double its revenues in the coming year."

Exam schedule pushed back one day

T-Screwed

"Exams will be postponed for one day."

This was the remarkably shocking announcement that was released from Dr. Rosehart's office this morning. Both faculty and students who had been diligently preparing for the start of exams this coming Thursday were stunned, with the announcement being greeted with mixed reactions.

"I just can't believe it," eighth year business student Laura Allen bitterly commented. "I mean my whole schedule has been thrown off. And the worst part is that I have to buy a new day planner."

Allen has already started working at her summer job selling used paint and now has to re-book time to coincide with the new exam schedule. "This is ridiculous."

Not everyone was displeased with the decision. In fact, some students openly welcomed the announcement, including sub-par student Paul Forrest.

"This works out great for me," said John Carlaw, Wilf's regular and Political Science and History student. "Now that my Monday exam has been rescheduled I can go out and do heavy drugs all weekend at Wilf's," he said of his favorite establishment.

While many had found the announcement to be a surprise, the circumstances that caused it are equally shocking. According to an undisclosed source, a male student was caught humping the Theatre Auditorium doors after he got stuck in the doorjamb. Laurier Security officials have dismissed this story as a "vicious rumour probably started by that clown Mike Belanger."

Rosehart and other university officials have also denied this story, but they claim it to be the fabrication of a sick individual, "most likely from Student Publications." Unfortunately, the administration has not offered a complete explanation as to why exams have been postponed.

"While we deny the allegations that the rumored incident took place, I can assure students that I have stopped wearing underwear," Rosehart commented.

"For one thing we at the Senate believe that the hardworking students at this institution deserve a double servings of slap in the face," Rosehart added. Still, many are skeptical about the Senate's motives.

"I believe that unrestricted growth and student cheating may be a factor," one faculty member commented. "But it also may be that people at this school are idiots."

There is also evidence that supports the possibility the various members of the Senate may have fabricated this postponement in order to take advantage of cheap vacation rates to Mexico. Once again all allegations were denied. Except the one about Rosehart not wearing underwear. Jerry Young told us that one is true. True.

Torrid love affair rocks Union

"Scandalous."

Some are calling it the biggest surprise of the year, while others are describing it as long overdue.

The fiery relationship between the Vice-Chair of the Board of Directors, Kristi Edwards, and Board member Regan Watts has finally exploded in a fit of passion and graduated to the 'next level.' Neither of them could be happier about it. Both have admitted that they are now going steady, and that the relationship can be described as intense.

"I could feel the sparks flying between us during every Board meeting, so I finally let him know how I really felt," said Edwards in a candid interview. "Regan let me know he felt the same way by throwing me on to the table in the Board room and giving me the most passionate kiss. He's really romantic."

This revelation came as such a surprise because the two pretended to hate each other with the fire of a thousand burning suns all year. Trading snippy comments and insolent glares, no one could have guessed that love was blossoming. How wrong they were.

"We were scared to tell people at first, especially because I won the election and Regan was the sole loser," Edwards continued. "Our passion has become so intense over the past few months, though, that we can no longer keep our hands to ourselves when we're in public."

First hearing about the relationship from the Cord, Paul Tambeau clearly looked ambivalent. "Well, I'd like to begin by saying that I'm a robot. I'm unable to feel any human emotions, so I don't feel anything about said relationship. I'm unable to laugh, or cry, or love, or hate. There are no tears in these eyes." He also wanted to make it clear that he talks like a robot as well.

Watts was not as forthcoming when discussing his new relationship, preferring to keep his answers foggy and ambiguous.

Harris returning to Laurier

Juan Carlos

The 180th of the 180 extra students admitted to Wilfrid Laurier University for next year is none other than outgoing Ontario Premier Mike Harris.

Just last week the provincial government had pressured Laurier to accept 150 more students. Coincidentally(?), Harris' name was 180th on the list of additional applicants to be accepted.

Harris has resigned his seat in the North Bay riding of Nippissing to return to WLU.

Harris wants to "be involved in student politics, to drink and to party," in inverse order. To do this he will have to be enrolled in some actual classes. He has yet to decide which ones.

He asked, "does it really matter?" when asked about the issue.

Before becoming a teacher without an Arts degree and a golf pro, Harris was once a Laurier student.

A phrase describing his performance here may best be that of a first year "Christmas Graduate," who apparently liked to party.

When asked why he chose to return to Laurier rather than attending some other declining post-secondary institution, he pointed to "my kind of people" being present in student government.

However, his poor performance made transferring to another school impossible. "Nippissing didn't even want me back," he confessed.

Harris also likes the cut of WLUSU's jib.

"There has been remarkable 'cooperation' from Laurier student representatives," Harris said as he made quotation-mark-like gestures in the air. "They seem to be ambitious. Fortunately for me, their foremost ambition is to be active in the Conservative Party."

The Millenium Leadership Fund, initiated by the Ontario Progressive Conservative Campus Association (OPCCA), did not hinder his decision. This fund gives money to student election candidates from the Conservative Party.

WLUSU's Board of Directors Chair and Vice-Chair each received money from the fund this year, and both have important positions in WLUSU again next year.

"It helps us know which student leaders are our 'kind of people,'" Harris said, using his quotation mark gestures again. "And if there's ever any doubt about a student politician's political stripes or questions of loyalty, we can just ask the OPCCA to check."

Currently there is a fight going on in the Union over whether Myles Wilson, a BOD member, or Kristi Edwards, VP: University Affairs, would get to resign to allow Harris to run in a WLUSU by-election.

It is felt the gesture would win the outgoing Premier's utmost affection. As well, the student who resigns is expected to be given the Tory nomination in Harris' former riding, quite the carrot for these horses.

In an earlier statement concerning his resignation, Harris said "Now it is time to pass the torch to others who will carry on with the task of improving Ontario and standing for the people of Nippissing and all northerners."

Afterwards, Edwards and Wilson both went on the record

"Iron Mike" announces return to Laurier in front of WLU party faithful stating "I can do Northern!"

Under conflict of interest rules, Harris cannot work for a company in its dealings with the province for one year after leaving office.

"And what better way to spend a year than nights at Louie's, Wilf's and the Turret. I'm no starving student, so I can even raise the roof at high class clubs too. Phil's? Phorget it!"

Harris had sought out private sector employment, but surprisingly had been rebuffed according to several Bay Street insiders and party backers.

"His meaning of common sense is a little different than ours. We loved his tax cuts, but no wonder education is such a mess. He's nuts."

"His math makes no sense. Just think back to his campaigns. In fact he's still saying that lower taxes mean more revenue. And he says it with a straight face. Masterful! But although voodoo economics are great politically, they would bankrupt us."

According to Harris' website biography, which fails to mention his time at Laurier, "As a teenager, he worked as a guide at the camp, leading tourists to the best fishing spots. These early years led to a genuine love of nature and made Mike Harris the avid sportsman, golfer and skier that he is today."

Then it states that "years later," at the age of 45, he became Premier.

As a result, one major issue for Harris, who helped make university much less affordable for the average student, is that of green space. Short grass green space.

"Willison Field should be turned into a golf course," stated the former golf pro. "Upper-class students shouldn't have to leave campus to get upper-class exercise. And while I was Premier one of my first priorities was to make it legal to drink on the golf course — an added bonus."

He's also fishing to get into politics right away.

When asked at his press conference if he thinks that university students will vote for him, he stated, "I expect to be acclaimed. If I'm not, I have thousands of dollars for posters that will say 'I love Laurier.'"

"I would also criticize my opponent for 'just not being up to the job.' While these statements don't really say anything, if repeated enough times in paid political advertisements they are actually quite effective. I will also repeatedly use the words Common Sense."

"Please don't ask me to elaborate on what that means," he continued.

"I just hope Laurier students don't hold the academic degradation I've caused during my time as Premier against me. But I think people generally have short memories. Many also fail to see the link between low government funding for universities and rising tuition."

"We blame the federal government, the feds blame us. People don't know what to think. It works for health care too, surprisingly."

WLUSU BOD chair Paul Tambeau had earlier replied to concerns about Laurier Student election candidates receiving money from the Tories in Western's Gazette, by stating that it "insinuated we're being bought off, like there's a Big Blue conspiracy."

However, Harris' desire to change Laurier's colours from Purple and Gold to Blue and Gold has raised some eyebrows.

"I like purple," says Diva Donny.

Finally, Harris, known as somewhat of a big drinker during his time here, expressed concern over the imminent closing of the Grad Pub. "It's only been there four years. To close it so soon, with the way the kids and I like to drink, does not make Common Sense."

"Don't get me wrong, I don't really care about grad students per se. That's just too much education as far as I'm concerned. But I've heard its not a bad little pub."

Brantford students attack main campus

'Die die die' becomes rallying chant of students from the "other" WLU

Willy Hickory

After a year of complaints about growth and overcrowding, the Laurier community is about to become a little more upset.

In a hostile takeover, the oft-slighted Brantford Campus has taken control of the main campus. All Laurier Waterloo students were transported to Brantford, where the 8,000+ will attend school at the single-building campus.

University President Bob Rosehart is being accused of orchestrating the power move in an attempt to shut up the Students' Union, says outgoing President Dave Prang.

"I'm finally in a position where I can say what I feel and I'm pissed. Rosehart has been jerking us around all year and this is the final straw. Right now he's up there in his office, calling bus companies for the cheapest rate to ship us out of here."

The Brantford students began arriving in their U-Hauls as early as nine o'clock this morning. The strategic plan has allocated one student per residence building floor, in order to maximize comfort and the theme of responsible growth. It is projected that as many as 19 of the 25 Brantford students will be making the move to the "big campus."

When reached for comment, Rosehart could only manage a sly smile, and a "Tell Prang he can stop his crying. I win. Like I always do and always will. I win. Tell Pushalik he might as well give up now. I rule this place with an iron hand."

Incoming WLUSU President Andy Pushalik was visibly upset by this unrelenting attitude from above and fears the effects this will have on Laurier's Maclean's ranking.

"Rosehart thinks this is a dictatorship. Well, I've got news for him. I don't subscribe to communism. I'm a fascist, and this school will rule Maclean's one day," he said before dancing what was described as "the most un-rhythmic cabbage patch ever done."

In the meantime, Waterloo students have been protesting the move by refusing to leave their residences and classrooms. WLU security manager Peter York has declared Martial Law and anyone who isn't off campus within 3 hours of their initial warning will be detained in the basement of 202 Regina until they either agree or are "done away with."

The one thing Rosehart has done in a gesture of peace towards the evicted Waterloo students is to ensure that Maneesh Sehdev, the in-coming Editor-in-Chief of The Cord, will not be permitted to take the position as EIC of the Brantford paper, The Sputnik. He will not be permitted on either campus for any activities outside of academics.

"I've had just about enough of this hardcore reality he's spreading," cursed Rosehart. "I will not have him turning more innocent teenagers into metal-heads and Satanists. You can tell that Slayer fan to call me if he wants to fight."

"Tell Prang he can stop his crying. I win. Like I always do and always will."

Union Board members admit literacy deficiency; Wellhauser delivers lessons

Gherkin

Progress is described by ex-Board of Directors members as "slow, but steady," as they continue the arduous task of teaching next year's board to read and write.

Literacy has long been an issue with BOD newcomers, for reasons that have generally been open to debate. One outgoing BOD member, who preferred to remain anonymous, pinpointed the problem as being one of "biting off more than you can chew."

"These elected Directors, sure they have lots of dreams about what they want to do within their positions, but that certainly doesn't mean they know how to go about doing it," explained the outgoing director.

"Lots of director-hopefuls on the campaign trail promise to do a good job representing the students and fighting for what the student body wants, but rarely do you see one touting their relevant experience, much less stating the basic fact that they are capable of sounding out a word. I mean, you have to walk before you can run, and all that."

Some have attributed the fast rise of past directors to positions such as chair of the board to their advantageous grasp of the English language. While no one recalls what skills Ben Durrer brought to the Board years ago, they do tend to agree that he was literate when he began his job this year.

What really tends to shock those who learn about this dirty little secret is that the administration is in large part literate, and tends to conduct the majority of its business in written form. This can present a heavy disadvantage to new Board members who must conduct dealings with the administration, while facing the steep learning curve of their A-B-Cs.

Previous rumours of widespread illiteracy throughout

Said one eager director, "Dick is with Jane. Jane runs. Run Jane run."

Don't you dare...we've already talked about this...you know we'll have none of that tripe around here.

Laurier, including at Student Publications, have died down in past years. Some, however, still believe that without spell-checking software, Student Publications would be facing the exact same problem as the new directors.

"Jesus, I just don't know if I can handle this," said one flustered BOD newbie. "Yesterday it was d-o-g, c-a-t, stuff like that, today its r-e-f-e-r-e-n-d-a. And the math, well you can just forget about that."

Never one to pass up a challenge, this year's Executive Vice-President: University Affairs, Dave Wellhauser has agreed to lead the effort to educate and generally prepare the young directors for what they will face.

By a rigorous training regime beginning with basic phonics, and ultimately advancing into middle school composition, it is hoped that the new recruits will be sufficiently primed to deal with the menacing admin.

Said one eager director, "...Dick is with Jane. Jane runs. Run Jane run."

Wellhauser and his assistants seem pleased with the progress, and all signs point to a literate Board by the end of the summer. Said one trainer, "it's not as though they're slow. In fact, they're a clever group of people who just never picked up the skill set."

Following the training in literacy, it is expected that the Board will pick up the lobbying, administration and representation skills necessary to being an effective member of the student government.

Secret society turns dangerous

Amomanda Fistpenetrate

In a move considered shocking by many groups on campus, several members of the Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity have broken out and formed their own renegade brotherhood, known as Lambda Al Qaeda.

Angry that several Pikes are "babies" and "big jerks" -- a fact that has historically been shrouded in a veil of secrecy -- President Brian Costello decided to spearhead an operation to create the new fraternity.

The Pikes true colours, which some suggest have been evident for much of this Winter term, broke through to the mainstream on Monday night at the Students' Union volunteer dinner. A witness at the scene who wishes to remain anonymous, commented that a lot of Pikes were "super-pissed" when everyone began rubbing their eyes and whining like "small Pike babies."

When asked why he chose to align with the fraternal/paramilitary Al Qaeda organization instead of just creating a new club, Costello cheerfully replied that "no one will dare mess with us now. If people think they got the last laugh by calling us names, they are sorely mistaken."

Another ex-Pike who is now a member of Lambda Al Qaeda, continued by saying that the paramilitary group was chosen as their affiliation because they instill anxiety and fear in all those with whom they come in contact.

"There is absolutely no way that people will mock us the way they ridicule the Pikes. They're nothing but weak fools who could do nothing to stop the taunts and jeers of the infidels on this campus."

A new Lambda Al Qaeda recruit, who was not a member of Pi Kappa Alpha added that the new organization will be a powerful force on campus and that it has the potential to make innumerable changes: something at which he believes the Pikes have never been successful.

Among the many new initiatives of Lambda Al Qaeda are strictly enforced rules concerning the new fraternity attire. The Cord Weekly has learned that it involves pictures of Lucille Ball, but nothing else is known. If things get out of hand and the fraternity suffers the same fate as the Pikes, Costello promises "a fiery wrath, the likes of which Laurier has never seen before."

It is clear that this fraternity will be very close-knit, but the recruitment campaign will be extremely extensive. "We're looking for people with passion and integrity," says Costello. "This fraternity is not based on gender, either. We're looking for people who are willing to put their student lives on the line and work with us to achieve our goals. Our main goal, of course, is to make sure we don't have any babies among our ranks."

The establishment of this group on campus is considered appalling by many people, but they do have one strong supporter. Professor Peter Eglin, who was recently arrested for his involvement with the Al Pikes split in two over inner conflict. Clothing for the new fraternity to involve Lucy Ball.

Qaeda network, is voicing his endorsement of Lambda Al Qaeda.

"It's about time we had a left-wing fraternity on campus. Western already has one, and so does Queen's. It's all about progression, and it's all about saying 'all about' as much as you can."

It's not known how far these Lambda Al Qaeda members will go to preserve their integrity, but it is definite that they are not fucking around anymore. They mean business.

IN MY OPINION...THIS IS A JOKE

Puttin' the 'bon' in bon vivant

I'm a bit of a bon vivant.

I know that's a foreign phrase, so let me break it down for you. Bon is a french word that means "good." Vivant means "life." And that's what I'm all about, compadre: good living.

So to sum up this sweet, cool lifestyle, I loves the wine, the women, and the world - in all its sweetness. C'est ma vie!

But it hasn't always been wine and roses. My double-breasted, classic cut suits did not just grow on my shoulders. This gold watch did not just appear on my thick, hairy forearm. Christ no, I had to drag my way up on the backs of those I crushed in my path.

Now, I know this sounds like a grisly sort of thing, but in truth, a bon vivant like myself can make almost anything a bit more sweet. I've got quite the poetic soul, so when I defeated my opponents in "battle," it was with Sun Tzu at my back, and with Ayn Rand on my horizon.

Those are a couple of great writers, let me tell you. Twain too, you know that quote about "golf is a great walk ruined." Twain may not know the same south as me, but he sure as Hell know the same golf as me!

In case all this bonne lettres talk is making you think I "putt from the rough" (he he), let me talk a little more about the women. It's pretty hard to be a bon vivant without the women. But you gotta give them some of la dolce vita too, or else they just won't respect you. You know how it works, champ, quid pro quo. And keep that poetry coming, none of that militant shit, give 'em some of the Dickinson and Kipling. Keep 'em swooning.

Remember though, when you are living in the land of milk and honey with a bevy of debutantes at your beck and call, you have to keep a clear vision of who you owe your success too. In my case, it just happens to be myself, but c'est la vie. Keep your friends close and your enemies closer, I think that's an old quote by Augustus. The holy always have the most realistic vision of the world. Keep that in mind, remember to feed your spirituality.

Appreciate the arts too. Especially those arts that have been proved by the test of time. Take some trips to Provence as well. This isn't necessarily art, but why look at what artists painted when you can see what they painted with your own two eyes?

As for keeping in shape, remember that a healthy body produces a healthy mind. Nothing crazy, mind you. Shooting a few holes a day is about all you need. The road to sweetness is the golden mean, and my golden mean leads right to the 18th hole!

Money also has its importance. You can't let greed get the best of you, but remember that your cottage in Muskoka isn't just going to build itself, and your speed boat isn't just going to do the job of Johnson and Evinrude for you.

Some people, I must concede, have a hard time reaching the bon vivant status that I have managed to arrive at with such facility. Well, tough shits to them. The big dog eats first, or to put it in my particular bon vivant manner, le grand chien mange premier. Enough writing for now, I've got some Zinfandel that needs drinking.

WHO'S SNICKERING Now?

I have recently read with some concern several issues of the Cord published at the end of this past February and the beginning of March. The first contained a phony Snickers ad and the others had several letters which more or less asked for the editor's ass to be sewn up while people fed him pasta and earthworms. My intent is not to discuss this kind of punishment, although I will say I am in favour of these alternative types. The message I wish to convey is that we, as a corporation, do indeed think starving children could use a Snickers Bar. For this reason, we have recently set up our Sierra Leone Division. I hope this helps solve your dispute.

Snickers, Inc.

WHEN POLLY ATTACKS

Is there anyone on this campus that isn't afraid of little green birds? I cannot believe the entire Laurier community is completely oblivious to these small emerald menaces that are slowly taking control of everything on this planet.

It all started with that blasted Hitchcock guy, stupid fatty. He thinks it'd be a huge laugh making birds the bringers of evil, swacking women in the heads while they're rowing across lakes. What a fool is he! Am I the only one that sees how much this one film affected the bird world, so much so that it has travelled all the way to our own Publications office?

Even as I'm writing this letter, a small and ominous emerald parrot is staring me down from atop the Yogen Frusz counter, peering at me with those beady little eyes, just daring me to make the first move. But I'm smarter than lil' Polly there, I'm just going to wait until the Thundercats show up and save me. They always do...

Oh my god, there are ducks in the Quad!! The parrots are recruiting! Will we never be saved!! Stay indoors! They have bills and they know how to use them!

Can no longer eat crackers

THE CORD IS THE WORST STUDENT NEWSPAPER THIS WORLD HAS EVER SEEN

I don't know much. For example, I don't know my head from a hole in the ground. I also don't know good journalism. What I do know is that the Cord is a terrible newspaper. Where was it for my event? Everyone at this school works so hard, and all the Cord does is crap on us. They crap on us like a moose on a pterodactyl. Yeah, you know what I mean...lots of crapping. Like the mark I got on that paper I handed in four and a half months late last year. Why doesn't the Cord write more sappy, soft stories about unimportant issues. Oh wait...you already do. Like that time I crapped on your lawn. Oh yeah...like a dog in the night.

Jennifer Boger

HAVE YOU EVER..?

Have you ever wondered whether you were a fascist? It may sound silly but do you think that Francisco Franco or Benito Mussolini woke up one morning and said "hey I think I'll be a Fascist dictator when I grow up?"

I've always considered myself to be a good common sense revolutionary but I think that was just because that was what everyone else was doing. I mean the random funding cuts and corporate tax slashing was fun but it was always the spontaneity -- the 'don't think just do' aspect of it that I always enjoyed the most.

Now that the reign of Harris has come to an end and the great revolution is just a memory I've been feeling empty. I had a lack of direction and a need to be lead. But then I thought why not me. Why don't I put my Wilfrid Laurier degree to good use and give the province, the country, the world, the kind of despotic unyielding leadership it deserves.

Fascists got a bad wrap back in the 20th century and many of us on the right wing have been wary of associating ourselves with the fascist label. But this is a new millenium and if we don't take action won't we just be leaving the world vulnerable to the same worn out misguided socialist policies of the past. Isn't it time we as young up and coming conservatives took the next logical step.

It's time to step out of the shadows. It's time to stand up and be counted. It's time to say what we mean and do what we say. I'm ready to lead are you ready to follow?

BJ Tripper

WELL, HAVE YOU..?

Have you ever wondered if you were a communist? After the collapse of the Soviet Union people kind of dismissed it but isn't it time we gave it a second chance?

202 Regina Monologues a tremendous success at WLU

Liny the Eskimo

After the widely acclaimed broadway and book has changed the face of students everywhere, an excerpt from 202 Regina Monologues is published here publicly for the first time in The Cord Weekly. Said the Waterloo Times: "This is the cutting edge of art! I mean, this is the true voice of intellectual students at its best!"

WLU Student 1: I bet you're angry.

WLU Student 2: We are angry.

WLU Student 3: We are angry about 202 Regina.

WLU Student 1: We are angry because of what we think about 202 Regina, and even more angry about what it has done to us. We need another source of 202 Reginas—a town, a city of 202 Reginas. There's so many problems and hate for it—Like a rich man when doing his taxes. He doesn't want to submit all of the income he makes, but goddamn it, he's gotta do it.

WLU Student 2: First of all, it's not easy visiting 202 Regina. Students go hours, days -- sometimes years -- of waiting in line. A member of the Board Of Directors was interviewed and said he was too tired from waiting in line. Waiting for your registration, he said, is a full day's work. You have to wait in line ups to give and get registration papers, OSAP info, and pink slip transformations that when you find out you're in the wrong line, another day has been wasted.

WLU Student 3: So there were 202 Regina interviews, which became 202 Regina monologues. Over 6,000 WLU students were interviewed: Jose Carlos, Manny Weirido, Bingo Bango Bongo, Dave Wellhauser, tall students, midget students, rich students, welfare students, smart students, drunk students, cult organizers, man haters. At first, all students were reluctant to talk. They were a little shy. But once they had the chance to speak their mind, you couldn't stop them. All WLU students hate 202 Regina.

WLU Student 1: Just think of 202 Regina. It may seem like a street address... umm, maybe it is, but there is a meaning to it. If the building could talk, it would say: "Ha ha ha! Give me your money! All you'll get in return are the classes you didn't register for and long line ups to deal with the problem! Ha! And you thought that a University education was VIP to replace Rosehart -- as co-Presidents!

Kaptain Klean

After serving for years as the backbone Laurier, President Robert Rosehart has been fired.

In one fell swoop, Rosehart was fired and his replacement was named. The new president for the first time will actually be a group. And not just any group, Laurier Alumni and Music's Band of the Year, VIP.

The decision was easy for the Student Alumni Association given the decreasing popularity of the staunch Rosehart and the growing adoration for Man-bands like VIP.

"They are just taking off," said President Benjamin Seewald of the band led by Glenn Coulson and Joe Heslip. "After they were voted most likely to be the next Laurier President at their respective convocations, it was an easy choice."

Seewald said it was an honour to have his organization chosen to pick the next leader of Laurier, but he had to fire everyone on staff to ensure his dream of a Man-band boss was accomplished. There's nothing like being told everyday by your boss that they are not gay, he went on to say.

The end of the Rosehart era was a tumultuous one, ending abruptly with Seewald's call to the former President.

"After about 20 seconds of heaving breathing, he finally spoke. He told me the 'jig was up' and I had 48 hours to clean out my office and head for the hills, there was a new boss in town," said Rosehart.

"I can't believe they gave the job to those two pretty boys. And with all that 'We're not gay talk, they must be hiding something.'"

Coulson and Heslip would not comment on the record, but sources close to the band say this is something they've wanted for a long time. Since their return for alumnus day, and seeing all the "visual improvements" in the student body, they decided they had to come back with some power. And nothing breaks sexual tension like power, so watch out Laurier.

As Joe said during a round of mini-golf in the Concourse, "Chicks, Chicks, Chicks" will be the university's new slogan. The old slogan, "Among Canada's Best" was also proposed, with the addition of "At Having Hot Chicks." However, this slogan was vetoed by Glenn who thought a short, punchy slogan would work better.

As their first act in power, the Man-banders have done away with the academic requirements needed to enter Laurier, and replaced it with a 'two-on-one' interview with all applicants. In a press release to the CORD Weekly, the new power-partnership has decreed that "Laurier will be the hottest, most promiscuous campus known to man and it will all be traced back to the Presidents' Office."

Rosehart has declined to pass on his future plans for employment, but word on the street has him interested in customer service where he can further improve his personable ways.

easy to attain!" "Regina!" Sounds like the female body part, but with an 'R' instead of a 'V'. Witty enough to get rave reviews and say that talking about 202 Regina is an art, a desire that was secretly held back.

about 202 Regina.

WLU Student 3: In my head I call it Hell. The epitome of evilness placed into an actual infrastructure that breathes on our need for classes and money!

WLU Student 2: We are angry

WLU Student 1: When I eat spam, I think about 202 Regina as an asshole that just loves to shit out more shit. Just full of crap that never gives me the goods. Now I suffer by living in a hole infested with rats and more shit...oh wait... that's all student housing.

An interview with a bat-gopher

Scotty

Interview with Mike: A Bat with a Gopher for a head

Scott: So you're a bat...

Mike: Yes

Scott: With a Gopher for a head

Mike: That is correct

Scott: Is it a gopher for a head, or a gopher head?

Mike: I don't understand...

Scott: Like... is your head a full gopher with like feet and a stomach and stuff, or do you just have the head of a gopher attached to a bat body

Mike: Bats don't have feet...

Scott: Next question.... What are the advantages of being a gopher bat?

Mike: Well... I can fly like a bat can, but I can see stuff like a gopher. Like... I don't need sonar, and I find female gophers to be attractive and stuff.

Scott: Do you find female gopher bats to be attractive?

Scott sat down with the freak bat/gopher and talked anatomy. And then he ate him, tooth by tooth...

Mike: They're sluts.

Scott: Do normal bats ridicule you because of your gopher-like qualities?

Mike: Bats are blind, so they think I'm a normal bat

Scott: But doesn't their sonar like... Pick up the outline of a gopher head on your wee bat body?

Mike: I slick my fur back so they think I'm an old Italian bat

Scott: Can you turn into a vampire?

Mike: No.

Scott: Do you know any gopher bats that can turn into vampires? And would they be vampires with gophers for a head?

Mike: I'll be honest... I don't know any other bats with gopher's for a head. I'm kind of lonely actually.

Scott: Awww...well I met a gopher with a bat for a head... would you get down with a girl like that?

Mike: Who would be on top?

Scott: Good question. But I'm the one asking the questions here. Do you know any Giraffes with a bat face?

Mike: That's absurd. Who comes up with something like that?

Scott: I'm just saying, is all.

Mike: I know a fruit bat that has this thing for jelly fish.

Scott: Is that legal?

Mike: Is what legal?

Scott: Getting down with jellyfish.

Mike: The animal world is kingdom of perversion. There are no rules or punishments. It is vicious and primal.

Scott: That sounds pretty awesome! Any last words for the humans out there with humans for heads?

Mike: Like...they have human heads, or humans with arms and stomachs and ears for heads?

Scott: good question. Thanks Mike.

Mike: party on!

Cord shifting directions

Corporate WLUSP pressures student paper to be "more like the 'Union' – lame, uninteresting and bad"

Remy Aight

There's a new wind blowing through Student Publications and it certainly isn't coming from the left. After having been accused multiple times on Club Laurier's on-line forum for its perpetuation of a left-wing agenda, both corporate WLUSP and Cord staff alike felt it was time for a change. Matt Cade in particular was quite vocal in his desire to see the Cord move drastically to the right of the political spectrum.

"I'm sick of all this bleeding heart bullshit. My vision is to expand the Business section from one page to eight pages. Wilfrid Laurier has never paid enough attention to the needs of its business students. I for one, have had enough."

While Cade's sentiments are clear, the Cord Editorial Board is concerned for the future of the paper as Maneesh Sehdev takes over as Editor-in-Chief in the fall of 2002. Notorious for his punk rock persona and disdain for the mainstream, volunteers for the paper fear the new right-wing agenda may be lost in the process.

"I think we've had far too many stories this year trying to inspire a social consciousness among students. I mean really, who cares if there's people starving in Afghanistan? Just give me a Snickers and let's go to the Turret," said Amy Wright, before rushing off to catch Survivor on Global.

One of the significant changes at WLUSP will be the questions demanded of applicants. No longer will WLUSP require information regarding an applicant's experience, education or interests; but rather, only one question will be asked. "Do you think welfare recipients should receive more or less money from the Canadian government?" Any applicants who answer "more" to this question will not be considered for any WLUSP positions.

"It may seem a little drastic at first, but it's the only fair thing to do," says Edward Schall, VP of Finance for Student Publications. "As a student paper, we need to start representing the student body. By looking at two postings on the web site, I can tell this is not being done. We decided it was only fair to re-model the entire paper to make these two people happy."

Plans for the first issue of the year include a feature titled "Stockwell Day: Getting Under the Wetsuit," as well as the long-awaited editorial "Gun Control: Who Needs It?" by Dillon Moore. Keep your eyes open.

Monkey man travels to Laurier

Phil Sore

In a rash of violence, vandalism, and all-around mayhem, the infamous "monkey-man" of New Delhi has apparently chosen Wilfrid Laurier University as his location to make a re-appearance.

Originally reported on during the long hot summer months of 2001, the monkey-man gained fame for terrorizing the poorer people of urban India while they slept on their roofs to avoid the stifling heat inside their homes. For days, a sort of panic spread throughout the city as reports of late-night clawing and mauling circulated. Eye-witnesses swore that they had seen a creature resembling a mix between a man and a monkey with bizarre claws, leaping from rooftop to rooftop.

At the end of the summer, the official word on the mysterious beast was that it was merely a case of mass hysteria. But some did not believe this official line, choosing instead to remain steadfast in their belief that the monkey-man was very real and very dangerous. It seems that recent happenings at Laurier will vindicate these stubborn seekers-of-truth, as Waterloo authorities begin their desperate attempt to track down the "beast-from-the-east."

Initially, the continual breaking of the gate arm in lot 20 was seen by authorities as a sure sign that a new and powerful force for evil had entered the campus. With the explosive growth in window-smashing and finally the flagrant tipping of a vending machine, it became apparent that the crime spree had just begun.

Soon descriptions of the alleged perpetrator were flooding in, and all pointed towards the horrendous simian-like man. Those who saw the WLUSU boardroom flag stealer fleeing the scene described the very individual that security had feared might be loose on the grounds.

"He was running away, almost in a loping, leaping, fashion. He kept letting out little sentence fragments, 'essentially, which-what, basically.' It was terrifying," confided one shocked witness.

Authorities have managed, at enormous personal risk, to obtain a single photograph of the deranged creature. Anyone who sees the beast is advised to play dead. Authorities are hopeful of an imminent arrest.

The notorious monkey man in action, seen here gloating over the body of an innocent victim. Thankfully, there has been an end to the bloodshed.

THE UNLUCKIEST PERSON EVER

Regan loves Kristi, Kristi loves Regan

"Well, I don't want to draw you a map, but we've made out 16 times, in 5 places. And let's just say we weren't 'walking' on the hawk, you know, buddy?"

When asked how this would affect her role as next years Executive Vice-President, University Affairs, Edwards replied, "this only means that I won't be seducing as many of my volunteers. I should be able to cut my indiscretions down to one or two a month."

The future of this relationship is as shady as its indecent beginnings, but rumours have already begun to fly about other Union couples. Current Student's Union President Dave Prang was seen walking in the same hallway as Vice-President Human Resources Laure Lafrance last week and the talk won't stop! If that isn't enough, Board member Stirling Prentice was caught in the bathroom alone last week, fuelling rumours that he too, is off the market.

Whatever the current state of these relations, one thing is for sure. It clearly pays off to volunteer for the Student's Union. Big time.

And what's the biggest joke of all?

How about the short hair and the clean office?

CAN YOU DRINK A LOT OF BEER?

join the big talkers society!

we're at all the major bar nights, keg parties and social gatherings all year.

you might know us from around campus because you constantly have to listen to our stupid stories about how we got sooo drunk last night and slept with EVERYONE.

Just ask our newest members Dillon and Wayne. Last night, they:

- drank 86 bottles of beer
- slept with 12 girls each
- smoked 13 pounds of crack
- stole a cop's car
- did several impressions of Ric Flair to commemorate their walk home from the bar. Woooo!
- passed out for four months
- got along famously with various frat members

Don't you wanna be like them too!?
